

Everyday Speech

5 Steps to Play

STEP 1 Agree on a game.

STEP 2 Make sure everyone knows the rules.

STEP 3 Set up the game.

STEP 4 Play the game.

STEP 5 Say "good game" and help clean up.

Find more at everydayspeech.com

Try adjusting the format of the title/icon/logo to match the other 3 posters so we can see them all as a series.

I really like what you are doing with the offset colored boxes in the background here. Just be sure to keep it consistently places. The formatting on step one looks the strongest, the formatting on 2 and 4 seems a bit off.

Make the steps bolder so that the eye naturally knows to scan from #1 to #5.

I really like the way you use of color on this poster. If you need a different blue that isn't so close to step 1, try #1185A6

Self-Controller Scanner

Scan your brain and body

Pick a strategy to get back in control

Take the steps you need to get back in control

Everyday Speech

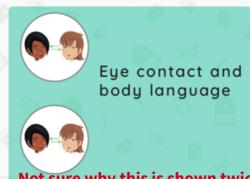

Consider adding numbered steps to this, or having an arrow that shows the order of each of these

Conversation Drivers and Stoppers

Conversation Drivers

Behaviors that drive or keep a conversation going

Make connected comments

Share the conversation time

Conversation Stoppers

Actions that will stop a conversation before it's ready to be over

Everyday Speech

More visual hierarchy on the page - this text should be more bold or larger so that the eye knows what to look at first.

1st most important: Conversation Driver (title)
2nd most important: Behaviors that keep the conversation going (subtitle/description)
3rd most important: Make connected comments (examples)

Side note - a long but good read on visual hierarchy:
<https://www.toptal.com/designers/visual/design-principles-hierarchy>

Also, consider using Source Sans as a way to complement the Quicksand. Too much of the same font can make the poster harder to read.

I think this needs more of a visual divide between 'Drivers' and 'Stoppers'. This doesn't have to be a line across the page, but something that shows "these are opposites."

Background Brief

When we talk with others, we want to share all the information about our story.

Everyday Speech

Try to left justify the text here. I think it will be easier to read if it isn't centered.

Consider adding a solid background to the speech bubble so that the pattern does not show through.

Consider modifying the titles a bit so they are more stylized, something a bit more like one of these options:

HOW HOW

Consider changing the background a bit so that it feels more fun.

One idea is putting a background gradient in, but it's just a thought, I think there are other ways as well.

For the versions we show Brittany, let's do tabloid size portrait view. That shouldn't be a big change from what you already have and that way she can print them to see what they look like at full size.